48. Now I'd like you to think about all political offices at the federal, state and local level. Often when you vote for these offices, you must choose between an incumbent who is running for re-election to an office he or she already holds, and a challenger who does not hold that office. In general, are you more likely to vote for the incumbent running for re-election or more likely to vote for the challenger who does not hold that office?
